The ten days' hot spell, with a brief let-up on Saturday and Sunday, culminated yesterday with an official temperature of 88 degrees, the highest, with a single exception, since a continuous record of the temperature has been kept in Burlington, which is since 1904. On July 2, 1911, the mercury reached 100 degrees, which established a record. The high mark yesterday afternoon was followed by a thunderstorm, during which the thermometer fell to 70 degrees, followed by a drop of 20 degrees in the temperature. Forecaster Hooper of the government weather bureau station is of the opinion that the force of the hot wave is broken and that a more comfortable temperature may be expected.

ARE YOU UNLUCKY?

In August the air is full of pollen and dust that cause trouble for some, yet others are never bothered. No remedy does more to relieve hay fever and asthma than Foley's Honey and Tar Compound for coughs, colds and croup. It clears the throat, soothes the inflamed membrane and bronchial tubes. J. W. ON A TOUR OF INSPECTION CANNED FOOD FOR STUDENTS

Surgeon-General Gorgas of United States Army in Town.

Coming to Burlington from Officers' Training Camp at Plattsburgh. He Will Visit Fort Ethan Allen To-day.

Major-General William Crawford Gorgas, surgeon-general of the United States army, the man who made possible the building of the Panama canal and freed Havana from the yellow fever scourge, arrived last evening in Burlington, and will inspect the Port Plattsburgh. The members of General Gorgas' party, who spent the night at the Hotel Vermont, were Col. C. Develle of the French army, Major W. H. Welch, M. R. C. Chandler, and Major C. L. Furbush, M. R. C. U. S. A.

The party of distinguished officers arrived on the afternoon boat from Plattsburgh, N. Y., where yesterday they inspected the officers' training camp. They will inspect the officers' training camp, particularly the Post hospital and the sanitary conditions at the reservation. The party will go from Burlington to Madison Barracks, N. Y., where they will inspect the officers' training camp. It is probable, however, that they will be forced to remain to-night in Burlington because of inability to make required rail and water connections. In that case they will leave Burlington early Friday morning.

General Gorgas dined on the roof garden of the Hotel Van Ness with the other members of his party and retired at an early hour, leaving a call for 6:30 o'clock this morning. His 38 years stay in the country court house. It is also well for those who are liable to be conscripted into Uncle Sam's army to know that the board will not, under any consideration, hear oral argument or accept legal written briefs. All must appear in person, must be affidavits, and if the board is not satisfied with the affidavit, they can investigate the matter fully.

In an interview with a Free Press representative General Gorgas said that he had promised the officers at Plattsburgh to look into the poliomyelitis situation in Vermont, but declined to state whether or not the quarantine would be lifted so that the men at the training camp could enter Vermont. He expressed a desire to do this if it should prove consistent with his views regarding what was best for the health of the men at the camp.

His trip, he said, was a part of his regular duties. He had found everything at Plattsburgh in a very satisfactory condition and the men bearing up well under the intense heat. His inspection at Fort Ethan Allen would occupy only a few hours, but it might be necessary to make an apparent inability to make the proper traveling connections he would probably have to remain in Burlington another night.

General Gorgas spoke very pleasantly of his previous visit to Burlington about two years ago, when he lectured at the high school building, concerning the building of the Panama canal. This lecture was under the auspices of the State health association, which was holding its annual convention here at that time. The beauty of the city and the charming people whom he had met had always been a pleasant memory, said the general.

It was as chief sanitary officer of the Panama canal that General Gorgas gained his greatest fame, after that time that he was in a recipient of the Medal of Honor. He was made major-general and surgeon-general of the United States army on March 4, 1915. General Gorgas is a recipient of the Medal of Honor medal from the Liverpool School of Tropical Medicine and the gold medal of the American Museum of Safety. He is a permanent director of the international health commission of Rockefeller Foundation.

DISTINGUISHED FRENCH OFFICER.

Colonel Develle of the French army is a distinguished officer, who, after being severely wounded during the present war, came to America with the French commission. As he had not completely recovered from his wounds, he remained here in an advisory capacity. General Gorgas' staff, Colonel Develle is an officer of handsome person and intrepid bearing, while his many medals and wounds bear eloquent testimony to his valor.

The examinations were completed yesterday at the Post for applicants for commissions in the army as second lieutenants.

The cobblers are wanted by the National Guard at the Post and application may be made to Colonel Hyland. No married men are wanted at present.

A large part of the rifles have arrived for the National Guard and the men are putting in several hours of intensive drill each day in order to get in shape. They have been hampered considerably owing to the delay in getting their equipment.

HEAT FATAL TO J. M. FORANT

Weak Heart Prevents Recovery When Prostrated.

Boys and Girls. Plenty of It in Sight for U. V. M.

The boarders at Grassmount and the Commons, more popularly known as the "hash house," should have a sufficient quantity of canned foods next winter to satisfy the appetite of even a college boy or girl. If you doubt it, just go up to the top of the building and inspect the apparatus of the extension service of the State college, turning out canned goods, quickly and scientifically. The apparatus itself doesn't do the work of course; it's under the skilled direction of Mrs. B. A. Chandler, assistant, and her assistants, but it's quite an affair just the same. The food supply which is canned is raised on the college farm. This is the first year that the university has tried the scheme of supplying tables with canned foods, and the canning process only started yesterday.

The canning machine, apparatus is a better word, has a capacity of 1,000 tin cans a day. It can likewise accommodate about 100 two quart glass jars during a day. The tin cans are much smaller and can be stacked in rows, that is why so many more can be filled at a time. The canning process itself is pretty difficult for a layman to explain. The food which is canned, it is packed and put in a vat which is heated by steam pressure, and then the jars are put in another piece of machinery which looks like a steel cylinder. Nobody is advised to try canning by this method, however, until after they have consulted with the State university expert.

All details for the community canning, which may be commenced next week, have not been completed, but will be announced within a few days. The special canning apparatus may be put at the disposal of the community, with certain restriction, on certain days of the week, but the canning will not be done free of charge.

STATE DEMONSTRATIONS PLEASE.

Director Thomas Bradlee of the extension service has returned from a business trip to New Jersey and West Virginia, where he was in charge of the State demonstrations which are being given throughout the State by three of the university's experts are proving very well attended and, according to the people who witness them, very profitable. The demonstrators are in the vicinity of Middlebury, Brattleboro and Richmond this week.

Demonstrations will be given at some time this summer in the following places in the State: Richmond, St. Albans, Richmont, Middlebury, Brattleboro, Vergennes, New Haven, Chittenden, Proctor, Wallingford, Manchester, Bennington, Townshend, Bellows Falls, Chester, Hartland, South Woodstock, Woodstock, Bridgeport, West Brattleboro, Barnard, East Brattleboro, North Ferrisburgh, Ferrisburgh, Chelsea, Bethel, Northfield, Roxbury, West Berlin, Orange, Wells River, Barre, Peacham, Waterford, Walden, Wheelock, Craftsbury, Sheffield, Sutton, New Haven, West Haven, Newark, Barton, Charleston and Canaan. The list may be increased as new requests for demonstrations are constantly being received.
